THE LAND OF FLOWERS.

A trip through Southern California at this season of the year is inspiring to a Nevada. It is in truth the land of flowers. Where water can be had for irrigation, the land is in a high state of cultivation. There are many beautiful towns, some on sites selected by the Spaniards many years ago, and others in locations chosen by the more enterprising Americans. The new Southern California is the result of a Yankee invasion. Men who made fortunes in manufacturing and other enterprises in the East invested in lands in Southern California and built homes in which they spend the winter months among flowers and in the sunshine. The temperature rarely reaches the freezing point, and semi-tropical fruit and ornamental trees adorn the landscape. Every village looks like a flower garden, and Eastern customs prevail. Towns with from one to ten thousand inhabitants vote against license laws and the saloon of the northern country is unknown. Though wine is produced in abundance, it can be had only at the drug stores and at meals at the hotels. The hotel, by the way, is a great institution in Southern California and in many of the towns one of the principal sources of income in the winter months. Prices are high, but the accommodations are good.

California from Tehachapi north to the headwaters of the Sacramento is divided geographically into three great divisions—the Sierra Nevada, the Coast Range and the great valley lying between. A part of the valley south of Fresno is as barren as the saccharine plains of Nevada, though most of the land is under cultivation. Wheat and barley are the principal products, but in dry seasons like the present the crops in many parts of the valley appear from the window of a railroad car as if they would not pay for harvesting; in fact, there is nothing to harvest. Beyond question, the rich sage covered lands of Nevada would produce without irrigation as good grain and as much of it as the plains south of Fresno. A wet season is essential, without it crops are a failure, and beyond reasonable doubt, the plains of Nevada, where sagebrush grows luxuriantly, would produce year in and year out as much grain to the acre as the plains of Fresno and Tulare counties in California.

The extravagant customs of the mining towns and districts of Central and Northern California are unknown in the southern part of the State. There are few dens south of the Stanislaus and they have not engendered their habits on the population. The streets in the towns and villages are as smooth as parlor floors. There are fine buildings, commodious hotels, which are supported by tourists, good school houses, comparatively low taxes, and very little of the business bustle peculiar to northern towns. It is a desirable locality for those who can live on the interest of their money, but seemingly a bad place for a poor man. At no place visited by the Press Association, except Sacramento, Los Angeles and San Francisco, was there as much evidence of prosperity as is apparent in Reno, but this may be due to the fact that it was the close of the orange season and too early for the grape and olive season.

The Press Association received courteous treatment everywhere except at Santa Barbara, where the through attending the floral festival was too large for the capacity of the city, and especially do they remember the Sacramento and Redlanders for their hospitality. The trip was delightful, a round of pleasure and a panorama of beautiful sights and scenes from beginning to end. Not only the Southern Pacific Company, but the California Motor Company, whose kite-shaped roads traverse the great citrus belt of Southern California, favored the visitors in many ways and the officials and employees of these companies were uniformly gentlemanly and obliging. Such a trip at this season more than at any other, shows the great diversity of climate and resources of the Golden State, as the valleys are now clad in their summer robes, while in the mountains, from Truckee to Cliso, an average of three feet of snow fell within a week.

SILVER SENTIMENT IN CALIFORNIA.

There is a strong silver sentiment in California. Free coinage is the principal topic of conversation in the hotels at Los Angeles and San Francisco and among passengers on the cars, and if the question is squarely presented to the people by the politicians the electoral vote of the Golden State will be cast for a free coinage President. There is here, however, the machine politician, with an eye on the public crib, is endeavoring to mislead the public and may succeed in doing so to a considerable extent. While professing friendship for silver, if a Republican, he shouts for McKinley or Reed for President, and if a Democrat, for any candidate the party may nominate, except Cleveland and Carlisle. It is not uncommon to hear an Eastern visitor say he is for Reed or McKinley, because they are opposed to the silver heresy and to have a California spokesman tell you he is for McKinley, Reed or Allison because they are favorable to silver. None of the daily papers in San Francisco are for free coinage regardless of party. The Examiner, Call and Chronicle and their evening auxiliaries are owned by mill-owners, and they do not express the sentiments of the public on the financial question. All of them opposed Adolph Sutro for Mayor, yet he received more votes than all the opposition candidates combined. Many business men in the city say the sentiment for free coinage is as universal as it was for the election of Sutro for Mayor of the city. They say there is a surprise in store for the machine politicians and they will discover it when the election returns are published.

The Jones Trial.

Melter and Refiner Harris testified yesterday, principally regarding his position and the appointment of J. T. Jones as his assistant and concerning the duties of the Melter's and Refiner's Department, also regarding the transfer of the bullion from the former administration of the mint to the present. He described his first suspicions and the realization of the deficiency. He then reported to Superintendent Adams requesting an investigation. Substantially the evidence was that given at the former trial, regarding the bogus Bodie melt and the discovery. The cross-examination by Woodward was critical and extensive, but elicited no new facts.

Andrew Mason, the expert, was the next witness, but after an examination on a few technical points, Court adjourned till 10 A. M. to-day.

The Laughable "Kids."

Theatre goers have a reputation for liberal patronage when a meritorious entertainment comes their way. The coming engagement of Ezra Kendall and his laughable "Kids" at the Opera House next Thursday evening is going to demonstrate the truth of this statement, for the call for reserved seats already insures a good audience. If one enjoys a good hearty laugh he is sure to get it in "A Pair of Kids." The newspapers in all the large cities have praised both Mr. Kendall, his company and play for the past ten years. The entertainment is of the pantomime burlesque and farcical order, containing plenty of singing, dancing and taking specialties, and all these are sure to keep the audience sufficiently entertained.

An Old Settler Passes Away.

Rose Jones, an old settler of the Truckee Meadows and Reno, after a long illness died Sunday evening. Mr. Jones was well known by nearly every resident and was highly respected. For the last few years he has been particularly unfortunate and died very poor. He has struggled manfully against adversity and it is thought that this had much to do with his sickness. He seldom complained, but waited patiently for the end which he knew was not far off.

He will be buried from his late residence on West street this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

A Train Wrecked.

Freight train No. 6, between Reno and Truckee, was wrecked near Floriston Sunday afternoon about 3 o'clock. The train wrecked was a section of No. 3, and was carrying cattle. The engine and seven cars were derailed, killing 12 head of cattle. Vaqueros were sent up from Reno and all but one of the cattle turned loose by the wreck were captured. The shipment belonged to Grayson & Owens. Wrecking trains from Truckee and Wadsworth were soon on hand, but nevertheless trains No. 3 and 4 were delayed several hours.

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

It is in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

THE GOLDEN STATE.

Observations of a Member of the Press Gang.

On the evening of the 14th instant twenty-six members of the Nevada Press Association left Reno on an excursion to California. They crossed the Sierra Nevada at night and woke up next morning among flowers, blossoms and grain fields in the vicinity of Sacramento.

AT THE CAPITAL CITY.

The party was greeted by a delegation from the Northern California Press Association which was there in session in that city, with a California welcome with all that the term implies. An invitation to breakfast at the Sutter Club rooms was accepted with thanks. A sumptuous repast prepared by the Press Association awaited the guests. E. D. McCabe, Governor Budd's private secretary, welcomed the visitors to the State, Mayor Hubbard extended to them the hospitalities of the city, President Willis of the California Press Association acted as toast master, and the Nevada guests were royally entertained. Electric cars were especially chartered for the members of the press, and Editor Woodson of the Record Union, Secretary Filcher of the State Board of Trade and others accompanied the guests and pointed out places of interest in the city, among them the State Capitol and Sutter's Fort, erected in 1845, and fully restored a few years ago by the Native Sons. Sacramento is a progressive city and those who saw it, as the writer did, immediately after the floods of 1891-92, would not recognize it now. Electric power generated by the American river at Folsom is transmitted to Sacramento, twenty-two miles, and used to run street cars and furnish motive power for factories, and to light the city. This power is cheaper than steam, and as it can be used for almost every purpose requiring power, it must necessarily result in making Sacramento a manufacturing center.

VINEYARDS AND GRAIN FIELDS.

From Sacramento south the road runs through a succession of vineyards, orchards and grain fields to Stockton from which point on through San Joaquin and Stanislaus counties grain predominates. The Southern Pacific road from Sacramento to the Tehachapi runs through a large valley. The coast range is dimly outlined on the west while the snow-capped peaks of the Sierra Nevada are plainly visible to the east as you journey southward. There are few cuts or fills and not very many streams to cross. Merced is a thriving city, and Fresno, farther south, is in the center of the raisin grape region of California. Irrigation has transformed this section from a semi-desert, which produced only scant pasturage for cattle and sheep, into one of the most beautiful and productive regions of California. But water becomes scarcer as you proceed southward and in a stretch of country fifty to sixty miles long, in much of which grain had been sown, it looked from the cars as if the crop would not make good pasturage, much less pay for harvesting.

SOUTH OF TEHACHAPI.

The Tehachapi range, which divides Northern and Southern California, was crossed at night. The railroad through the pass doubles upon itself, forming what is known as "The Loop," one of the great engineering feats of railroad-building. South of Tehachapi the contour of the country resembles Nevada somewhat. It is a series of valleys from a few hundred yards to several miles in width, skirted by barren hills. At Saugus a branch road leaves the main line and extends to the coast at Santa Barbara. There are oil wells, citrus groves, and extensive bean fields along this road, with the broad Pacific and Catalina islands in sight much of the distance. Every residence is embowered in beautiful shade trees, and flowers grow in profusion everywhere. The press gang arrived at Santa Barbara on the closing day of the floral festival, and about seven hundred persons from the villages along the railroad took passage on the train for the city to participate in the festivities. It was estimated that 18,000 or 20,000 strangers visited the city during the festa. It was a money making scheme, in fact a combination of business and pleasure. The hotels were crowded to their utmost and accommodations were at a premium. All seemed to enjoy the festivities and hundreds participated in the battle of the roses.

THE VINE, THE OLIVE AND THE ORANGE. The cities of Redlands, Riverside, Pasadena and Pomona are among the garden spots of Southern California, and of these Redlands seemed to strangers to be the most enterprising and progressive. Citrus fruits, olives, and grapes are the principal products of the country. The streets are as smooth as skating rinks, the buildings handsome and substantial, and all improvements of a permanent character. Near Redlands are the celebrated Smiley Heights, one of the most beautiful localities in the Golden State. Seipio Craig, one of the old residents and enterprising citizens of the place, entertained the press gang, whose stay was limited, as they had to make railroad connections, with a drive through the country and over the Heights. The orange and lemon groves were indescribably beautiful, the deep green of the leaves, the rich orange of the fruits and the white blossoms, of the trees, making a contrast in colors that has to be seen to be appreciated. The fig, the olive, the orange, the lemon, the palm, the pepper and the cypress, with vineyards, miles in extent, which at this season resemble the cornfields of the Mississippi Valley States in June, make a landscape that at this season is

A SOCIAL EVENT.

Philip Jacobs and Miss Sylvia Lachman Launch Their Bark on the Matrimonial Sea.

One of the most notable events in social circles that ever took place in Reno occurred at the Masonic Hall on Sunday afternoon, the 28th inst. The event being the marriage of Philip Jacobs, the eldest son of the well known clothier, to Miss Sylvia Lachman, the daughter of E. Lachman.

The ceremony was of more than usual note from the fact that it was conducted in accordance with the rites of the Jewish Church by the Rev. Dr. M. S. Levy, Rabbi of the Congregation Beth Israel, San Francisco. The Masonic Hall was decorated beautifully for the occasion, there being a profusion of calla lilies, ferns, smilax and wreaths of roses tastefully and artistically draped and hung in every available place.

Nearly a hundred guests gathered to witness the impressive ceremonies. Promptly at the hour named the wedding party entered the hall, Jerome Ash, a bright little fellow dressed in a picturesque costume, leading the party, and Freddie Levy, dressed as a flower girl, strewed roses in the pathway of the young couple as they advanced. S. Jacobs, the father of the groom, and Mrs. Lachman, the mother of the bride, came first, then L. J. Cohn, the groom's right hand man, followed by the groom and his mother, then Miss Sophie Jacobs of Carson, the bride-maid, followed by the bride and her father, B. Lachman. Dr. Levy followed the bridal party, and as the procession advanced, the wedding march was played by an orchestra in attendance.

A beautiful white silk canopy held by attendants was a feature, and the contracting parties and those attending them took their places under it. Dr. Levy at once began the ceremony in accordance with the Jewish faith, and which was deeply impressive to all present. At the conclusion of the marriage ceremony the young couple received the congratulations of their friends, and in proper time the guests were invited into the banquet hall and an elegant wedding supper was served. After the good things on the table had been thoroughly discussed, the guests were entertained by a number of pleasant little speeches appropriate to the occasion, Sol Levy acting as toast master. The evening was pleasantly spent until the train for the west was about to arrive, when Mr. and Mrs. Jacobs, amid a shower of good wishes from those present, left for California, where they will spend their honeymoon.

The JOURNAL extends its congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Jacobs and hopes that their whole married life may be as bright and happy as was their wedding day. Owing to lack of space the list of presents will not be published until to-morrow.

YAWN IN A MAIDEN SPEECH.
An Incident Which Typifies the Sleepiness of the English Courtiers.

The occasion of making one's maiden speech is hardly the time one would expect a legislator to select for giving vent to a yawn. It is nevertheless on record that some 30 years ago, when the present Duke of Devonshire, then Lord Hartington, was making his maiden speech in the house of commons he visibly yawned, and Mr. Disraeli, whose keen eye noted the occurrence, is accredited with having made the remark that "a man who can yawn in the midst of his maiden speech is capable of rising to the highest position in this house."

Since his transference to the upper house the noble duke has probably found even more facilities than existed in the commons for dozing.

Mr. Gladstone used to be a frequent offender in the same direction. The Grand Old Man was often lost to all consciousness of what was going on around him, and yet, marvellous to relate, after quietly adding a word through a portion of a debate, he would wake up, deliver himself of a big, long yawn, and then make a speech which, for lucidity and power of argument, would seem to imply that he had heard every word that had been spoken throughout the debate.

Mr. Chamberlain and Sir William Harcourt often appear to be fast asleep, but it is doubtful if either of them ever really loses touch of what is going on around him.

The habit of tilting the hat well over the eyes and sitting with bowed head and legs crossed one over the other is one which appears to find much favor with a large number of members in each succeeding house of commons, but it will always be a moot point whether they really go to sleep or merely "make believe," as children say. At all events, it is noticeable that they never seem at a loss for a word or sentence when the time comes for them to rise up in their places.

Putting all others out of the question, however, the champion sleeper of the house is Sir Richard Temple, who goes to sleep at all times and under all sorts of conditions. At times he appears to be anxious to ward off the feeling of somnolence which is obviously obtaining the mastery over him, but the effort is all in vain and his head will insist on falling upon his breast.

How his hat ever remains upon his head, seeing the dislocatory swerves and strange movements the latter assumes from time to time, is a matter for wonderment.—Penny's Weekly.

Can He Do Those Things?
Your 18-year-old boy may have a great deal of Latin and cubic root, says an exchange, but unless he can do the things enumerated below he is not even so fully well equipped as a business man or as a man of the world. Can he do them?

Write a good, legible hand.
Write a good, sensible letter.
Speak and write good English.
Draw an ordinary bank check.
Take it to the proper place in the bank to get it cashed.
Add a column of figures rapidly and accurately.
Make out an ordinary account.
Write an ordinary promissory note.
Measure a pile of lumber in your shed.
Spell all the words he knows how to use.
Write an advertisement for the local paper.
Make neat and correct entries in day-book and ledger.
Tell the number of bushels of wheat in your largest bin and their value at current rates.
Tell something about the great authors and statesmen of the present day.

Birds in Egypt.
It is delightful to note the tameness of the birds of Egypt. They enter rooms and houses through windows and crevices left for ventilation, and once inside hop fearlessly about the floor picking upstray crumbs. A sparrow often perches on the corner of the table during the progress of a crowded hotel repast, and it is not uncommon to see them flitting across the ceiling of a drawing room at Luxor. All birds, from the largest to the smallest, go unmolested unless they are definitely used for food. The great brown kite sits fearlessly on the roofs of Cairo, haled by his cousin, the crow, which is not black, like our crow, but is black and grey and might easily be mistaken for a pigeon. Every large garden at any rate in upper Egypt has its owl frequenting a tall palm tree and hooting or whistling as nature guides it.—Exchange.

Cathode Rays Not as Bright as a Candle
Now, one of the first questions I have been asked in regard to these rays is this, "How did you obtain a light so intense that you could take photographs through a board an inch thick?" The answer is this: The light is not intense to the eye. It does not appear as bright as that of a firefly. Indeed it cannot be seen on the darkest night at a distance of 300 feet. Yet a candle can be distinguished on a similar night at least a mile. But the rays of a candle are entirely cut off from a photographic plate by a sheet of pasteboard a sixteenth of an inch thick or even less. The cathode rays are intense, however, to the photographic plate, which can be termed the photographic eye.—Professor John Trovbridge in Scribner's.

All Soups the Same to Him.
Guest (to waiter)—I can't eat this soup.
Waiter takes it away and brings another kind of soup.
Guest—I can't eat this soup.
Waiter angrily but silently for the third time brings another kind.
Guest (again)—I can't eat this soup.
Waiter, furious, calls the hotel proprietor.
Proprietor (to guest)—Why can't you eat this soup, sir?
Guest (quietly)—Because I have no spoon.—Texas Siftings.

Great men use they who see that spiritual is stronger than any material force—that thoughts rule the world.—Emerson.

Is the Wardrobe.
A correspondent, whose home a newly arrived visitor in Rhodesia describes as "a very pretty place about two miles out of town," informs South Africa that Rhodesia is a fine country for clothes. A smart evening dress, which she has only lately had out from home, while hanging in the wardrobe accommodated a rat between the silk and lining. The horrid little beast nibbled a hole the size of a hand on each side of the skirt. She muses that if human inhabitants do not fancy one's clothes the white ants do. Failing them, you have flat beetles, and, supposing they desert you, the rat comes in, so no one can say fine raiment is wasted out there. "The wasps build nests in your candle shades, and the caterpillars or something weave or spin cocoons in your curtains."

Petrified Forests.
The regions of the Little Colorado river in Arizona abound in wonderful vegetable petrifications, which forests being found in some places which are hard to find, but which look as if but recently stripped of their foliage. Some of these stone trees are standing just as natural as life, while others are piled across each other just like the fallen monarchs of a real wood forest. Geologists say that these stone trees were once covered to the depth of 1,000 feet with marl, which transformed them from wood to solid rock. The marl, after the lapse of ages, washed out, leaving some of the trees standing in an upright position.

A Coincidence.
The English press deems it an interesting coincidence that President Kruger lost a thumb by accident, while Gladstone lost a finger. It is recalled that Gladstone, in describing the amputation of this finger, once said: "The absence of pain sometimes amounts to pleasure. It was once my fate to have a finger cut off, and I recollect perfectly well that when the surgeons ceased to hack me I was more delighted than I can express. I thought I never experienced so lively a pleasure."

Can't Drink Pure Water.
Arabs in the desert have contracted a strange prejudice against running water, and they will only drink what they find in some stagnant pool. So much has this become matter of habit with them that, while the most poisonous looking water agrees with them admirably, pure running water will make them violently sick.
